

Number Nine

Reflection on our choices leads to greater scenarios, The first time we make a choice inside a corridor we have to real control over the environment.

Second time we come across the same scenario, we are a little more prepared. Not knowing if we made the right choice the first time, we willingly open up that second door in hopes all the problems are awaiting our arrival behind it. Rarely is this the case, in actuality the first door was what our gut told us to go with. From passed down traits from generations upon generations our subconscious has an interface precompiled to our existence.

Third time we go back into door number one, and the second choice we will alter, however this isn't giving the perfect results we presume exist.

Fourth time we continue in door one, alter the second choice and make it a little farther. However the goal is still far in the distance and we are naturally weary because anxiety starts on the third repetitive action, causing us to over think and dig back farther into our brains, this is a good thing yet in small increments. When in reality, that threshold is yet to be established to our bodily limits.

Fifth time brings out courage, as the weak willed, feeble minded ones have been filtered out in worries of disappointment, eventually they will come back. Until then we persevere first, which leads us to the sixth attempt in hopes this is the final one, if you are the lucky one, depending on the scenario this could be it, or just one doorway from being the finalizer.

Seventh time, depending on the persons willingness as this point requires greater endurance, usually obtained from prior roads traveled. Acceptance that number eight is just right around the corner is a self preservation algorithm, because of all these ups and downs for the typical human mind real psychological impact both positive and negative have emerged, the key is to keep them separated, the first time around this level is likely to have them merge, immediate reflection on all of your positive experiences that you've gained from, and knowledge buried deep within the negative realm should be intertwined without awakening the negative course of thought processes.

Number Nine is typically that threshold, right before the double digits occur. The universe has secretly sent you down the right path from the first attempt to build up your abilities, because once you open this doorway, everything you expected is there yet embedded with all of the other elements at work. Now that you see your goal, you've got to continue the trek, as the final test you see all your heart desires, and you've still got your work cut out for you to organize, rationalize and initiate a final plan while the door is open and you are in the doorway.

A rapid selection of choices is in order, you are on the spot just as stage one your gut says one thing and your mind says the other. One piece of information stands out, your subconscious is aware of it and your conscious mind is flustered, and has a swell of negative chemicals assembling a blockade against the correct and positive choice.

You might be on the spot, however reflective meditation harnesses time restraints and utilizes our perception of time. By drastically calculating at speeds propelled by riding the waves of energy traveling at the speed of light.

An hour of contemplation and alignment feels as if it passes, your reflective reserves are depleted. The answer is clear, body aligns with mind, subconscious guides the conscious, and without any regret you make a once in a lifetime choice and you successfully align with inner purpose.
