

Polar Purge

Contemplative Meditation :

I've studied many Religions, Meditation Styles and common Scientific Experiments. Algebra is the Deciphering Element. A true purge in polarity, one set to align all with their unique inner light.

Christianity has rules and powerful enlightening guidance but I have yet to find one religion I can dedicate myself to. Temple, Church, Mosque all have Prayer in common, They offer the feelings of Peace, Safety, Tranquility and General Meditation as well as many other aspects.

But I meditate fine without undeniable faith of one specific fate.

I find pondering about Different Religious standpoints to trigger Contemplative Meditation.

I believe anyone who acknowledges the possibility of a higher power is right, However I feel as if I know the energy that is generated by man and accumulated within our universe does not belong to a single higher power.

I believe every human is that higher power and the Guidance we individually receive if result of proper alignment of concentrated minds.

I believe everything has a creator, I believe the creator of our universe added elements to monitor their collisions for the purpose of uninterrupted scientific experiments. I also believe the experiments developed by man are all unique and documented by our Spiritually connected higher power.

I believe the universe is the creation of a higher power such as *God*. However when we pray and receive undeniable proof of the true effects of repentance we *7 Billion* as a whole give a tiny fragment of negatively charged atoms to create a single positively charged atom.

How can one religion state its the only religion?

Religion has been a tool of mankind for greater good, in some cases the corrupt use religion to exploit people. I personally have nothing against any other religion, Because every religion offers its own unique way of tethering the host to all cosmic elements. Which allows a stronger, healthier society.

I know there is no positive without a negative, once all negatives are converted through human filter of thought we will all be brought into the spiritual realm only after humans perception of time has stood still for trillions of years in a galactic trance.